11th - 12th century: A monastery dedicated to St Andrew was built by monks of the Order of St. Benedict. These monks were from Amalfi in Italy.

1378 (approx.): Probably on the ruins of the original monastery, the monk Lavrentios, who had come from the great monastery was dedicated to Archdeacon Lavrentios who was martyred in Rome.

18th - 19th century: During this period the village thrived from agriculture and the craft industry. At the end of the 19th century the population had grown to around 2000 people.

1980 until now: Urbanization in Greece has reduced the population of our village. Today it's inhabitants are mainly working in tourism, with less reliance on agricultural production and the manufacture of goods. The permanent population is currently no more than 200 people.

Open Village is an initiative launched in 2017 by residents, local authorities and friends of Agios Lavrentios. The objective of the initiative is to contribute to local development by taking advantage of our cultural and natural resources. The main activity of Open Village involves the undertaking of guides tours in public building and private residences, offering an insight into the traditional architecture of the village, from small houses to great mansions, churches and public facilities. These tours are taken by residents and volunteers and take place over one weekend during the summer season. Parallel events, such as exhibitions, lectures, workshops and other educational programmes, highlighting the environment and cultural heritage of the village also take place. In addition, traditional music, special gastronomy and an open market over the weekend helps to make this a special time to visit the village. Entrance is free to every event over this special weekend. For further detail and confirmation of dates, please visit www.openvillage.gr
